Proposes water system improvements

Franckiewicz says annexed area sewer system project 99 percent complete

By BRENDA HEATHCOCK
The $2.5 million sewer system project for the annexed area of Bay St. Louis will be tested today as the construction is nearly completed.
Bay St. Louis Mayor Victor Franckiewicz Jr. said Wednesday city officials, representatives of the sewerage lift station pump manufacturer, and the contractor will be inspecting the system project which has been completed except for minor items.

He reported to the council Tuesday the project which includes installation of major sewerage lines throughout the annexed area is 98.9 percent complete.

Service lines have been installed to property lines within the area to be served and when the system was accepted by the city, owners would be notified they had six months to tie into the system, he said.

The individual property owners will bear the expense of the installation of lines from the houses to the property lines, he added.
The sewerage system is only part of the city services that must be extended into the annexed area to meet the demands of residents who received a default judgement against the city in a $200 million lawsuit last year.

Other services to be provided in the area are access to the city's water and gas systems, city lights and street improvements.

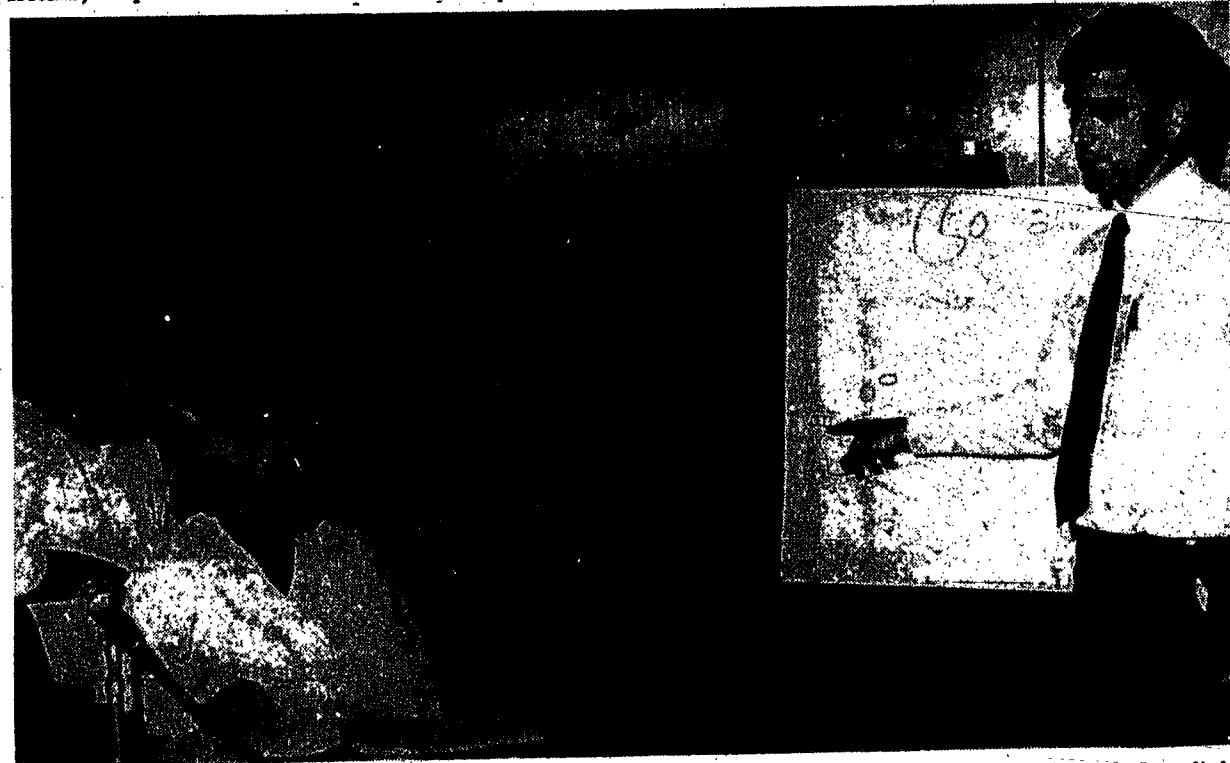

Also at Tuesday's meeting Franckiewicz proposed water system improvements including major loops in the water system, replacement of undersized water mains, a new water well, extending city water to areas not currently served and a new elevated water storage tank.

The loops in the system recommended are across US-90 on the west end of town and from the Old Spanish Trail to Spanish Acres.

"With these loops we can eliminate dead end lines in the system and offer better water pressure and fire protection in areas now served by dead-end lines," Franckiewicz said.

He also recommended other minor loops for the system but told the council these could be made by city crews.

Summer classes planned at Hancock, Gulfview

By DENA BISNETTE
Hancock North Central High School plans to offer summer English classes if minimum enrollments of 15 students per class can be met by June 23.
According to Hancock County Superintendent Terrell Randolph, classes in English I, II, and III are being organized because Hancock North Central students who tried to register for summer programs in other school districts found no more seats available.

He said the problem with class availability has never occurred before and is one of the results of the Educational Reform Act of 1981.

One of the programs mandated by the act, Accountability in Instructional Management (AIM), sets forth course objectives specifying what skills each student must obtain in a specific course.

If any student fails to obtain those skills, he does not pass the course, and, in the cases of required subjects including English, is not promoted to the next grade.

AIM went into effect during the recently completed 1985-86 school term, resulting in more students being held back than usual.

Randolph stated that the problem with lack of availability of summer classes at other districts or crowding where available had been

Bay school board still facing opposition to trailer purchase

BY DENA BISNETTE

The Bay St. Louis Municipal Separate School District Board has obtained two bids for classroom trailers but objections to the purchase of the modules continues.

The board took the bids under advisement Tuesday in order to evaluate the prices given for the units and the amount of time needed for installation.

The board has called a special meeting for 7 p.m. Monday and a bid is expected to be accepted at that time, according to Superintendent J.D. McCullough.

After the bid opening Tuesday, the board heard objections from Peggy Smith of Bay-Waveland Parents for Quality Education and from Bay St. Louis Mayor Victor Franckiewicz Jr.

Smith stated that her organization is opposed to the purchase of trailers because they "depreciate quickly and are not a wise investment."
"We feel it's a poor idea to invest in trailers," she said.

Franckiewicz read a resolution that the Bay St. Louis City Council had passed about three weeks ago after the board's vote to purchase trailers rather than construct a permanent kindergarten building at Waveland Elementary School.

The resolution opposed the purchase of trailers and advocated finding some type of temporary quarters during construction of the proposed kindergarten building.

"I believe trailers were presented as the only way we could get kindergarten started. At the time, we thought spending about $130,000 would be the only way," Franckiewicz said.

He said the board might have found additional alternatives for temporary classrooms for either kindergarten classrooms or for other classes if kindergarten students were placed on the main campus.

Alternatives proposed at the time had included the classroom facilities at First Baptist Church and St. Rose de Lima School. In addition to those, Franckiewicz proposed that the board look into the use of facilities at other churches, available shopping center space and the former Jitney Jungle building on Second Street.

The mayor said he had talked to students who had had classes in trailers; teachers and parents and "couldn't find anybody who likes trailers."

"I believe very strongly that the public is not in favor of classroom modules. We need to find another option and push forward with permanent classrooms," Franckiewicz said.

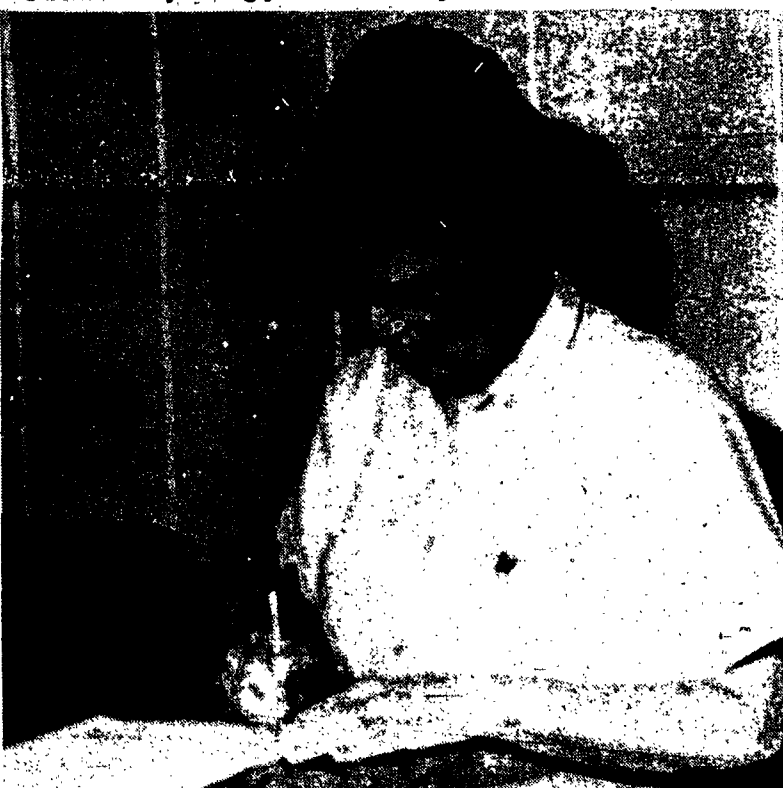

Board Member L.D. Carter also stated that he remains against the purchase of trailers. Carter had voted against purchasing trailers rather than constructing a permanent building.

Waveland Elementary School Principal James Baldree, kindergarten coordinator for the district, was absent from the meeting, but McCullough said Baldree's views should be considered before the decision to accept one of the bids is made.

He pointed out that Baldree is best qualified to explain how trailers will or will not work out with the other details of kindergarten implementation, such as anticipated enrollment, transportation and providing adequate cafeteria facilities.

Other business Tuesday was limited to the formal signing of a contract with McCullough's successor, Roger D. Oge' of Jena, La. Board President Betty Diboll signed the document, which had been signed by Oge' on Sunday.

Oge' was not present at Tuesday's meeting but is expected to assume the superintendent's post July 1, after his contract in Louisiana has expired.

As population grows species disappear

(Editor's Note: As human populations continue to increase, thousands of plant and animal species are threatened. In the second of a four-part series on 500-year problems, Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service Land Use Coordinator Bob Chapin explains the issue of species extinction and steps that may be taken to preserve plants and animals.)

By Mitzi Waller
 Mississippi Cooperative
 Extension Service

MISSISSIPPI STATE — As the world's human population continues to grow, thousands of species of plants and animals worldwide are vanishing each year.

"North America has lost 500 species since 1600, compared to a loss of 100 species during the past 3,000 years, said Dr. Bob Chapin, coordinator of the Land Use Center of the Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service.

"Species losses could grow to 10,000 a year worldwide in the next 10 years, and half the species could be gone by the year 2100," Chapin said.

The issue of species extinction is one of several that must be dealt with in the next 500 years, Chapin said. Other long-range problems are climatic changes, groundwater contamination and soil erosion.

"The purpose of 500-year planning is not to decide what to plan for 500 years in the future, but to identify problems that must be corrected during that time period," Chapin said.

Chapin said the major cause of species extinction is the pressure put on the land by growing human populations.

"Great species losses have occurred as tropical rain forests were destroyed to make way for agriculture, commercial forestry and other developments," Chapin said.

There are nearly five billion people on earth. By the standards of the American people, one billion people need three billion acres of farmable land.

"There are only 22 billion acres of farmable land worldwide, Chapin said. "This means the earth can support only 7.3 billion people."

Chapin warns that any species, plant or animal, that cannot coexist with man will be eliminated in the coming century as swamps, jungles and tropical forests are cleared to make room for commercial forests, pasture, cropland and cities.

Chapin added that the ideal population for the earth is probably three billion.

"For the world to return to that level families would have to be limited to two children," Chapin said. "Even then we would see a very slow decline."

It will take many years to stabilize the world population. As species continue to decline, agencies to collect and preserve various living plants and animals are needed in all nations.

"Large preserves of vanishing species need to be established as gene pools to provide raw materials for scientists as they find new needs for these plants and animals," Chapin said.

An example is research currently being done on the neem, a stylish tree of Asia and Africa. Biodegradable neem products kill or repel cockroaches and greenhouse pests on flowers and nursery crops when sprayed on leaves or applied to potted plant soil.

"Without the neem tree this important research could not take place," Chapin said.

According to Chapin, the point of 500-year planning is to prevent certain future states such as vanishing species from occurring and not to predict or dictate the future.

Joseph R. Scharff

Longtime Bay St. Louis business leader Mr. Joseph R. Scharff was laid to rest on Monday in his native Memphis.

He and his late wife were pioneers in the super-market-type of grocery operation in Bay St. Louis and Hancock County.

Mr. Joe, as he was affectionately referred to by his customers and friends, left an impression in the community which will long be remembered.

Many of our residents received early in life their first experiences in the work force as a bag boy or cashier for Mr. Joe at Jitney Jungle in Bay St. Louis.

He was well liked by his employees and several worked a lifetime for him.

A president of the Bay St. Louis Rotary Club in 1935-36, Mr. Joe exemplified in his dealings with people Rotary's Four-Way Test:

- 1. Is it the truth?
- 2. Is it fair to all concerned?
- 3. Will it build goodwill and better friendships?
- 4. Will it be beneficial to all concerned?

Active in Rotary until a serious illness last year, Mr. Joe was honored as a Paul Harris Fellow in 1979 by the Bay St. Louis Rotary Club.

One can remember Mr. Joe's special greetings to all of his customers, and many he knew by name.

In a modern type of grocery operation, Mr. Joe still used along with his employees that little personal touch in dealing with customers.

An example, if a customer wanted to know where an item was in the store, they would not be told aisle number such and such, the customer would be led to the spot where the merchandise would be displayed.

Many items such as produce were purchased locally by Mr. Joe, as he knew the importance of supporting his community.

We dealt with Mr. Scharff for many years working with him on his advertisements, and it was always a pleasure to do business with him.

We had fellowship with him for many years in the Bay Rotary Club, and will always remember his friendship.

To his sons, grandchildren and family we offer our condolences and the assurance Mr. Joe will always be remembered by the people of Bay St. Louis and Hancock County for the good example he set as a business and family man.

Preparation before a hurricane strikes

Hurricane Season begins this week and now is the time to prepare before an actual hurricane threatens.

Each person has special needs, such as medicines and prescription glasses, but also a general list to have on hand includes a supply of non-perishable foods, First Aid Kit, a fire extinguisher, a battery-powered commercial and NOAA Weather Radios, a flashlight and extra batteries.

The most dangerous element in a hurricane is the accompanying high tides and rough seas as the storm moves inland. Tides from three to 10 feet above normal are common, but can be much higher. If you live in a coastal area, have a safe evacuation route planned ahead of time. Get information planning in your area by contacting your local Civil Defense agency.

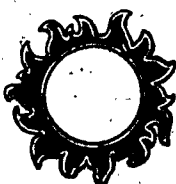

Hurricanes can cause extensive flooding, not just along the coastline, but far inland also. Flood insurance provides valuable financial protection.

You should be aware, though, that your homeowners policy does not cover damage from flooding. Check into the availability of flood insurance through the National Flood Insurance Program by contacting your local insurance agent. Hurricane watches, warnings and advisories are issued by the National Hurricane Center in Miami, Fla.

A Hurricane Watch means a hurricane has become a threat to coastal areas and is usually issued 24 to 48 hours before expected landfall. Everyone covered by a watch should listen for more advisories and act promptly if a warning is issued.

A Hurricane Warning indicates hurricane winds greater than 74 miles an hour and high and rough seas are expected in a specific coastal area within 24 hours. Precautionary actions should begin immediately.

Eyes on Mississippi

by Bill Minor

JACKSON—Until the tax increase impasse between Gov. Bill Allain and the Legislature is broken and more revenue is provided for state services, Mississippi very well could lose much of the gains it has made since the Great Depression to improve the quality of life for its citizens.

The picture of what is in store from the devastating budget cuts made in the 1986 legislative session is already being made horribly realistic to many Mississippians as July 1 draws closer. It also must be remembered that the latest cuts come on the heels of four lean budget years in which $300 million had been taken away after being appropriated to state agencies.

The thrust of the budget cuts is not so much that 4,000 state employees are losing their jobs, but that the poor, the sick, the newborn, the hungry are going to be deprived of services, the state is going to fall further behind in educating its best young minds, and fall behind in other ways.

Lawmakers have become so frustrated by it all, by their failure to adequately fund state services in the 1986 session, that they've come down to fighting like dogs over a bone to spend a meager $12 million carved from the State Highway Department's funds at Allain's behest in the recent special session.

Meanwhile, Allain is enjoying his Machiavellian role, watching the lawmakers snap at each other, while making it appear that distributing the $12 million would solve the whole budget crisis.

The lawmakers who are realistic enough to face up to the real budget crisis recognize that even $120 million would hardly restore many state services to a minimum level. The real needs of state government would require an infusion of around $300 million in new revenue, many believe.

But Allain, strangely adapting a posture almost identical to President Reagan, opposes any tax increase and refuses to recognize that governmental services are going to be dismantled if money is not provided to fund them.

ed in Mississippi.

Now, the Mississippi Legislature has tried the one alternative to raising taxes by slashing the state budget 15 percent overall (some sustained cuts of as much as 50 percent) and that obviously is not going to work.

Many Mississippians recognize that the crisis is not going away until lawmakers focus on the heart of the problem: when and how a substantial amount of new tax money is going to be raised.

Either Allain is going to have to abandon his acquired no-tax-hike position, or the leadership will eventually emerge in the Legislature to put together a tax package and, if necessary, run over Allain's veto.

This, of course, is what the Legislature had to do in 1985 to put through the three-year $4,400 teacher pay increase package. That happened only after a teachers' strike, a major confrontation between the Legislature and Allain, ending in the override of the governor's veto.

Other state services, however, don't have the dramatic appeal of the school teachers and have not been able to muster the kind of clout in the past to force a showdown between the Legislature and Allain on a tax boost to stop their disintegration. But that could be changing.

Already, we're seeing that one state agency, the Department of Public Welfare, is not going to take its deep cuts lying down. Demonstrations over the layoff of 740 welfare workers have broken out in several places.

In the Delta, where welfare benefits constitute a large part of the local economy, some lawmakers say the situation is a tinder box. One legislator said county welfare officials are fearful that riots could result if welfare checks are delayed and food stamp applications go unprocessed.

Nothing is more poignant than what is happening at the University Medical Center, where a 16.2 percent budget cut means 329 fewer staff positions than a year ago, and 60 hospital beds are being closed, and the number of babies that can be cared for in the state's only top level perinatal center must be reduced.

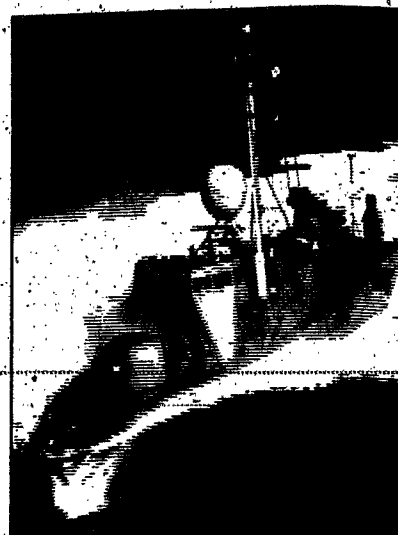

That, in a state with the highest infant mortality rate, is hard to understand.

While a valid charge can be made that there were some runaway spending programs at the federal level, that charge could hardly be sustained.

THESE CUTS WILL

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Variances render zoning laws ineffective

Letter to the Editor
Sea Coast Echo
Bay St. Louis

Dear Sir,

Subject: Objection to proposed variance clause described in Public Notice published in Sea Coast Echo June 12 and June 19 filed by Marie Johnson.

Objection No. 1: Should this variance be found acceptable, it will set a precedent, making it permissible for lot owners to build a wash shed, storage shed or other structures within 10 feet of the property line.

No. 2: With only 10 feet of clearance before a structure is built this would lower the value of property.

No. 3: Construction of a slab could cause a water flow drainage problem. Should this occur would it be a problem to be dealt with by the City of Bay St. Louis, or by the owner of the property?

No. 4: Should this variance be found acceptable to The Bay St. Louis Zoning Ordinance, it would be my suggestion in order to save the taxpayers money to advertise and hold meetings for each individual "variance" that the property requirements be reduced to the measurements outlined in the Marie Johnson petition, resulting in ads such as

Building permit required for drainage ditch improvement

To the Editor
Sea Coast Echo
Bay St. Louis

Dear Sir,

Do you know what it is like to be a female, 68 years old, head of a household with an invalid husband, making all the decisions, and being harassed by the police direct from the Mayor's office?

I have a drainage ditch running 13 feet through my property. It is eroding my land at two to three feet a year.

I had Mr. Redmann out to see it over a year ago—nothing was done. My councilman cannot be bothered with such mundane things.

Mr. Redmann did offer to let me buy culverts at $580 for a 20-foot section.

I met with my supervisor and told him I would like to bulkhead the ditch at my own expense. He agreed that would solve the problem, and make for better drainage. It would last 40 years.

The work was started Monday morning. The police were there in no time saying they were sent from the Mayor's office and that I needed a building permit.

I went to City Hall, paid Mr. Redmann $5 for a drainage permit to do his work.

Tuesday morning another policeman came asking why I did not have a permit posted.

I explained to him that Mr. Redmann said I did not have to post it.

Of course, other organizations and individuals can block up natural drains instead of opening them up.

Sincerely,
Leontine C. DeRocha

THE PEOPLE'S BUSINESS

THE PEOPLE MAY BE CATCHING UP

WITH THE POLITICIANS

The vote was close in last week's balloting for a constitutional amendment reducing taxes on owner-occupied residential property.

The vote by which the amendment was narrowly approved was a shock to legislators who pushed the proposal through the Legislature this spring.

The people may be catching up with the politicians.

The politicians championed the so-called tax reduction measure as relief to the home owner. Perhaps the people are beginning to see through this "something-for-nothing" puffery.

Yes, taxes may be reduced on residential property, if the millage rate is not increased. But, taxes will be going up on automobiles, utilities, and business property.

We know who pays the taxes on automobiles — the automobile owners.

We know who pays the taxes on utilities — those who use the utilities — the consumers.

And, we know who pays the taxes on business property — those of us who purchase the goods or services.

We also know somebody has to pay for schools, streets, roads, hospitals, courts, law enforcement, and the other services and institutions provided by the community.

We know "somebody" is us — those who live in the community and who enjoy the benefits of those services and institutions.

Only people pay taxes, whether it's taxes on residential property, on automobiles, on purchases, on income, or through higher prices for goods and services.

The politicians haven't reduced taxes; they have just hidden them. Mississippians may soon discover those hiding places.

Wastewater board planning contract dispute compromise

BY DENA BISNETTE

The Waveland Regional Wastewater Management District is one step closer to resolving a three-month-old contract dispute.

Board Attorney Lucien Gex and District Administrator Ethel Schott, briefed board members Monday on results of further evaluations of a contract with Reynolds, Smith and Hills of Jacksonville, Fla.

The board is expected to meet later this week with representatives of the firm to discuss the evaluation and possibly finalize the contract.

The contract is for engineering and administrative services for Segment III of a project that will eventually link the Bay St. Louis and Waveland sewerage collection and treatment systems.

Segment III consists of improvements to the existing Waveland wastewater treatment plant.

Gex and Schott are in the process of dividing the contract into two sections, basically separated into engineering and administrative services, as well as reducing some of the Reynolds, Smith and Hills charges that originally led to the contract dispute.

Reynolds, Smith and Hills provided the board with a revised list of charges after Segments III and IV were reorganized into Segments III, IV and V in order to comply with the guidelines of U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, which is expected to provide part of the funding for the Segment III if the board can meet an Aug. 1 deadline.

Board members John Longo Jr., Victor Frankiewicz Jr. and A.A. Kellar had argued that the cost estimates were too high.

Specific dollar amounts will not be released until the contract is finalized because the district may still have to opt for competitive bidding if dividing the compromise does not resolve the cost dispute, Gex said Tuesday.

However, the district is planning to propose reductions in some Reynolds, Smith and Hills charges for engineering services while turning over the administrative section of the contract to Ray Eaton and Associates of Jackson.

The board has proposed bringing Eaton back into the project because he was originally involved as part of Lewis-Eaton Partnership of Jackson.

Reynolds, Smith and Hills is an associate of that firm, now known as Ed Lewis Partnership.

Most of the reductions Gex and Schott proposed at Tuesday's meeting involved reducing the number of hours of work needed for particular items and reducing the amount of travel from Jacksonville to Waveland.

Gex and Schott are also negotiating with Eaton this week.

Allain appoints Griffin to Supreme Court

By ELLIS CUEVAS

Bay St. Louis resident J. Ruble Griffin was appointed Monday to fill the unexpired term of Southern District Supreme Court Justice Neville Patterson.

An elated Circuit Court Judge Griffin on Monday stated, "I will continue to call Bay St. Louis my home, even though my new position will call for my being in Jackson during the week."

Early Monday morning Judge Griffin received a telephone call from an aide to Governor Bill Allain informing him of the appointment to be effective July 1, 1968.

The announcement was made in Jackson on Monday by Allain's press aide JoAnn Klein.

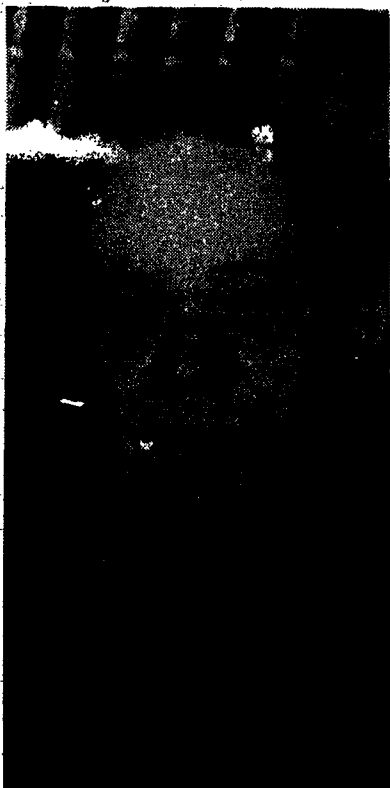

Griffin won the Democratic nomination for the Southern District's justice position in a close June 3 race against Laurel Attorney Jon A. Swartzfager.

No Republicans filed for the position and the deadline for independent candidates is in September.

The winner of the November General Election will not take office until January 1, 1969.

"I am glad that I am not without a job for a year, as I would have had to sit it out possibly, since my term as Circuit Court Judge expires on Dec. 31, 1966," Griffin stated.

The primary elections for circuit, chancery and some county courts were halted for June 3 by federal judges pending a full hearing on whether Mississippi's judicial district lines are drawn to dilute black voting strength.

JUDGE J. RUBLE GRIFFIN

Griffin said, "I appreciate the governor showing that much confidence in me, and I will do my best not to disappoint him or the people of the state of Mississippi."

Griffin, a resident of Hancock County since 1965 is a native of Webster County and stated after winning the Democratic nominee's position, "I have lived longer in Hancock County than any other place, and it will continue to be my home. The people of Hancock County have been extremely good to me and I appreciate my neighbors and friends who supported me."

Griffin said he still had several cases not finalized as Circuit Court judge before assuming the state judgeship, adding, "I would like to get those all straightened out, so they will not be turned over to someone not familiar with them."

Gov. Allain is scheduled to name a replacement for Judge Griffin's Circuit Court judgeship before July 1.

The resignation of 70-year-old

Judge Patterson, the chief justice, means the presiding Justice Harry Walker, next in line by seniority, will move up to the chief justice's position.

It is said a 20-member judicial nominating committee will interview applicants for Griffin's Circuit Court position and make as many as three recommendations to Allain, who will make the appointment.

Bay St. Louis Attorney William Frisbie, a Republican is seeking Griffin's vacant seat.

There are three coast lawyers seeking the Democratic nomination, John C. Johnson of Gulfport; William A. Tate of Saucier; and Jerry O. Terry of Biloxi.

"Man From Moscow"
reveals faulty
Soviet Intelligence

For most Americans who have followed the notorious British spy scandals of the 1950s and '60s, the British Intelligence community appeared to have as much security as a sieve.

Names like Fuchs, Burgess, Maclean, Lonsdale and Blake filled the nation's tabloids. And when Kim Philby, an upper-class career intelligence officer who had been the head of the Secret Service Anti-Soviet Section, defected to Moscow in 1963, doubts arose if anyone could be trusted.

Not so well known in America, however, is that while Philby and cohorts were leaking information to the Russians, a strategically placed Red Army colonel, Oleg Penkovsky, was providing sensitive Soviet information to the British—and was even smuggled into the White House to meet with President Kennedy.

This major espionage coup is the subject of a three-part, mini-series called "Man from Moscow," airing over PBS on Great Performances June 13, 20, and 27, at 9 p.m.

Penkovsky's contact in the West was Greville Wynne, a British businessman who was also an agent for the British Secret Service.

Wynne, who today lives in retirement in Majhara and upon whose memoirs "Man from Moscow" is based, had little in common with the upper-class Burgesses, Macleans, and Philbys with whom he shared headlines when he was tried in Moscow for espionage in 1963.

The latter three had all been together at Cambridge and after World War II joined either the Foreign Office or MI5 or MI6, the two arms of British Intelligence.

Although Burgess, subject of the Great Performances presentation last year of "An Englishman Abroad" was the most flamboyant of the trio, all three became career intelligence officers and as such were directly privy to highly sensitive material.

Greville Wynne did not move in such circles.

Nevertheless, he was the star, along with Colonel Penkovsky, of the extraordinary, showcase trial staged by the Russians to discredit him, Colonel Penkovsky and the West.

Law*

(Prepared by the Mississippi State Bar. Some rights may vary from locality to locality. Always consult an attorney when in doubt about your legal rights.)

Q: Can landlords raise the rent whenever they want to?

A: In a month-to-month tenancy, stability in the amount of rent may exist only on a monthly basis. In a year's lease, the landlord cannot raise the rent during the term of the lease. If the landlord wants to raise the rent during the lease period, he or she must give the tenant something in return, i.e., a new contract.

Landlords have one way to demand higher rent, an "escalator" clause in the lease. This provides that if the landlord's cost suddenly increased dramatically, for example, for energy, the landlord has the right to demand higher rent.

Q: Are landlords entitled to receive their rent under all circumstances?

A: In states that recognize the warranty of habitability, tenants can purposely fail to pay all or portion of the rent due because of the landlord's failure to keep the place livable. This is called "rent abatement."

If the tenant withholds rent, he or she must be prepared:

1) to defend the amount withheld in court if the landlord sues the tenant for eviction;

2) to prove that the defect in question was a serious one; and

3) to verify that the landlord was given notice that something was wrong and had the opportunity to fix it.

Failure to pay the rent without a reason is the quickest way to be evicted.

Annco joins national network

The Annco Security Service in the Bay-Waveland area has joined the national security network, Feelsafe. Jay Fleuriot of Waveland, who operates the local security business, said, "We are excited and proud to have been selected to be a Feelsafe dealer and will continue to provide the same quality service our customers have come to expect."

"Being part of the Feelsafe network will allow us to provide even more in the way of community service as well as state-of-the-art alarm equipment," Fleuriot added.

While Annco will continue to be independently owned and operated, the firm has been awarded an exclusive territory and will be joining approximately 12 other Feelsafe dealers in Orleans, St. Tammany and Biloxi.

Annco is the only source of Feelsafe security equipment in the Bay/Waveland area.

A resident of Waveland for four years, Fleuriot is a member of Hancock County Chamber of Commerce and the St. Clare Conference, St. Vincent de Paul Society.

He is also a member of International Security Conference, a professional association.

The Feelsafe network is composed of more than 200 companies nationally providing a variety of security services; residential and commercial systems, closed circuit television, satellite systems, and access control systems.

Members must meet stringent qualifications in the area of workmanship, service capability, installation record, financial stability and public image.

"We at Annco are more than pleased to announce our involvement in the program and we will continue to help the residents and businesses of Hancock County maintain control of their environment," Fleuriot stated.

There really was a large and lively party going on right in the middle of a rural highway outside Dyersburg, Tenn., the other day - so sheriff's deputies found when they rushed out in answer to a telephoned complaint about the goings-on.

Of course, the people were partying, right in the middle of the road - for they were experiencing that wonderful happening - a Crawfish Jubilee - that's what we call it down our way, and it's cause for jubilation, as even the smallest child can tell you, if he or she has ever tasted a mudbug, as we affectionately call 'em.

Of course, as the enterprising Associated Press staffer who reported the event, said, down this way, in Louisiana and Mississippi, we've been eating them for years - but, for most of those West Tennessee folks, these crawfish are something new.

According to the AP report, some folks declared the crawfish "not so hot - we cooked up a couple of pots and they're not too appetizing" while other, more appreciative residents, at least in my view, were more enthusiastic.

One said, that "you open up that tail and it's just like eating shrimp" as he scooped up another ice chest full of crawfish from a roadside ditch. "Just like" - he understates - it's better!

At any rate, the crawfish (some also understate and call them minilobsters) were crawling their way from low-lying areas flooded by recent rains, and being scooped up, of course, from rural roadways and roadside ditches in whatever containers on hand.

The sheriff's department in Dyersburg learned about the jubilee from the complaining citizen, and found that the "party in the middle of the highway" grew larger and more festive on succeeding nights and days.

Responding to the first call, deputies found 10 cars parked along the roadway, their drivers out catching the crawdads.

The next night, there were 30 cars, and the following night, 100 cars, from local as well as more distant areas, for, as one happy crawfish harvester said, "There's more at night, but lots during the day, too."

Undoubtedly, the ones who "just cooked up a couple of pots of them" and found them not too appetizing, didn't know how we do a "boil" of crawfish or shrimp or crabs - you can't just boil them up in water, oh, no, you must have a savory, spicy, hot-to-the-tongue tasting bath of spices and peppers and lemons and such, either one of our quite good commercial mixes or one of your own making.

But, in case they're not used to our "boils" let's offer a crawfish etouffee, repeating a recipe I gave not so very long ago, I think. (Of course, let's tell them, too that we savor the crawdads in jambalaya, in a creamy sauce, in a salad, as a cocktail, and in whatever way we can get our greedy hands and pots and pans on them.

I well remember a crawfish jubilee some years ago on a road outside New Orleans (before the days of crawfish farms and such) when we filled the trunk of a brand new car with the mudbugs as they covered the road - only to find some weeks later that one or two more had somehow found the way into the car itself - oh, the aroma and the trouble - but, well worth it!

From this, you can tell that I'm truly a devotee. So, if you want a "boil," either obtain the commercial seafood boil packages now finding their way into markets all over the country, or make up your own spicy seasonings - adding ears of corn, onions and potatoes to the pot for good measure - and good eating!

And, if you've some of the crawdads left over, why not cook up:

CRAWFISH ETOUFFEE

(You don't have to wait for a jubilee, of course, with all the crawfish farms and supplies these days) and, don't worry - this is just crawfish "smothered down" in seasonings - and delicious!

This is one of those "it depends" recipes - depends upon the amount of crawfish on hand. At any rate, pick the meat out of the crawfish tails, trying to avoid my fatal fault, munching as you go, or there won't be many left. For each pound of the cleaned crawfish tails, you need three or four green onions, with their tops, chopped, and also chopped parsley for garnish, and cayenne and black pepper and a bit of salt, and a dash of hot sauce and a little oil.

In just enough oil to coat the bottom of a heavy pot (black iron is best) heated to smoking, add the onions, saute a bit, and if you've any crawfish fat on hand, toss that in with a little water, for extra flavor.

Add the tails, pepper and salt, cover the pot tightly, and let the whole business simmer or "smother" for about 15 minutes.

As the crawfish "smother" or "braise" in their own juices, they deepen in color, just as if you've added tomato sauce, which some cooks do - but, not in my kitchen or along the bayous of Louisiana.

Increase quantities as needed and available, and serve over rice. And, enjoy!

Atmosphere, old building draw restaurateur to Bay St. Louis

BY DENA BISNETTE

The small-town charm of Bay St. Louis and a 1910 service station building have provided the incentive for a New Orleans, La., restaurateur to relocate at the corner of Beach Boulevard and Court Street.

Iler Pope, who owned and operated a restaurant called Dante-by-the-River in New Orleans for nine years before selling it to move to Bay St. Louis permanently, calls her new business Dante-by-the-Bay.

Pope said she has had a summer home in Bay St. Louis for seven years and has wanted to make her permanent home here for some time.

"I just love it here. I love the things you can do here, like crabbing and birdwatching. I would come for the weekend and then hate going back to the city," she explained.

She was familiar with the old gas station building when it went up for sale following the closing of the Raintree Cafe.

"Much of what I have added has been in keeping with the age of the building. In decorating, I tried to keep with the Art Deco style," Pope said.

"I've always liked the way this building looked and when I came in I liked how it felt. It just feels good."

"We're still working on decorating because there is a lot of stuff I want to do, but I'm having lots of fun with it," she added.

Pope said she selected bright colors from a New Orleans Redfish Festival poster she had had designed several years ago for Dante-by-the-River. Repainting the building, which had a dark green interior when she purchased it, revealed many of its original features.

Two items in particular attract the attention of customers. One is an old piano that Pope says "was just here when I bought the place."

"The next thing I knew I had a piano-playing bartender. He's pretty good and the customers just love it when he plays."

The large windows, most of which have views of the bay or the restaurant's plant-covered patio, also attract customer attention.

"It isn't long before someone asks to open a window, then they're all open. It's perfectly cool in here with them closed but I let them stay open because everyone seems to like it," Pope explained.

Sometimes the building's age and original use presented problems with redecorating. For example, Pope discovered that the project would take longer than anticipated. "It took two months with a good crew of workers and we were worried we wouldn't be able to have it open in time for mother's day," she said.

There was also the problem of one of the building's old features that was not particularly desirable but could not be removed—the base of a hydraulic lift once used for car repair.

"The thing stands right there in the middle of the office. The only thing we could do was paint it and make a planter out of it," Pope explained.

With the change in location, Pope decided a change of atmosphere was appropriate. The words she likes to use to define the atmosphere of Dante-by-the-Bay are "casual elegance."

"I like the casual elegance of this restaurant much more than the more formal atmosphere I had in New Orleans," she said.

"It's kind of fun, coming to work in pants and a bright shirt instead of high heels and 15 pounds of jewelry and a silk dress. I think it makes people feel more comfortable seeing my waiters and waitresses running around in flowered shirts and white pants instead of suits and ties."

One thing that has not changed is the food. Pope's chef, Carroll Odum, is the only member of her staff not hired locally, having relocated with her from New Orleans.

The menu still provides a mixture of classic French and Creole recipes along with a few dishes from Pope's native Mississippi Delta.

Pope buys the food herself and prefers to obtain as much as possible from local markets. She is a regular customer at the Hancock County Farmer's Market each Wednesday and Saturday. In addition, she obtains most of the seafood served at Dante-by-the-Bay from fishermen at Bayou Cadet.

"I love being able to go out and jump on the boat as it pulls up to the dock when I buy my shrimp. That's something I could never do in New Orleans," she commented.

In addition, the restaurant will soon be obtaining its herbs from its own garden, and all the ice cream served there is homemade.

The reception that Dante-by-the-Bay received when it opened several weeks ago was surprising, Pope said.

"We opened to a restaurant owner's nightmare, a full house. We had thought we would just ease into it, and we were so very surprised to see all those people."

"I'm also really pleased that a lot of my New Orleans customers have come over. I'm always happy to see familiar faces."

One of her goals is making Danteby-the-Bay a part of the community, Pope said.

Part of her efforts to do so include offering catering services and use of the restaurant for civic meetings.

Another is her addition of a week-day luncheon special called "the businessperson's lunch," something she felt the downtown area needed, and a cold luncheon special on Saturdays.

In addition, Dante-by-the-Bay recently extended its hours to include Sunday dinner because "so many customers asked for it," Pope said.

She said she sold the New Orleans restaurant and a deli she was operating across the street from Dante-by-the-River because it would be too difficult to run businesses located so far apart.

Pope said even without the New Orleans restaurant she still spends most of her time at work.

"I feel so relaxed here, even though I'm doing something all the time. I took a half-day off a while back and I got where I was really missing it," she said.

lines targeted for improvements include Suebe and Bouslog streets and northwest Cedar Point.

The water well and elevated water storage tank will be needed in the future to serve new growth in the city, he said.

Frankiewicz told the council he believed the loops and the replacement of undersized mains could be financed by approximately $400,000 of the $2.5 million loan which was not used in the sewer project.

The council has the option of using the $400,000 for further improvements or applying it to the loan payments. Supporting the intended use of these funds for water system improvements, the council authorized Frankiewicz to take proposals on engineers to do a conceptual design of the proposed improvements.

Frankiewicz told the council a conceptual design for the entire state of proposed improvements was needed to avoid problems caused by "piecemeal" construction.

He also has no intentions to proceed with additional phases of the sewerage project as originally planned.

Frankiewicz believes these plans to be worthless due to installation of lines in areas that could be served from another direction and because the current project takes in portions of several phases of the five-phase project expected to cost the city $12 million.

To plan future improvements and extensions, Frankiewicz said he had to go back to engineers reports from 1968 on the city's utility services.

Construction on the proposed water system improvements could begin in five to six months, he reported.

Bay lass is 'top seed' in Diamondhead horse show

Heather Lott, nine-year-old daughter of Morris and Mario Lott of Bay St. Louis is expected to enter several events Saturday in the Diamondhead Riding Club's annual show scheduled Saturday at the Diamondhead Stables.

Halter Gelding, Showmanship, Pony Pleasure, Pony Buckaroo, Buckaroo, Western Pleasure and English Pleasure are among the events she plans to enter.

She is expected to ride the pony Apples, an 1979 sorrel gelding Branded Breeze, and on her mother's horse called Rooster.

Ms. Lott recently qualified to compete at the forthcoming 15th annual American Junior Quarter Horse Association World Championship Show and Convention in Tulsa, Okla. on Aug. 3-9.

She will be among the 1,300 young people 18 and under from the United States, Canada and Australia selected to participate in the show.

She will compete with her registered American quarter horse, Branded Breeze, a 1979 sorrel gelding in the halter classes of the show. She is coached and her horse trained by her father. She will be representing Diamondhead Stables and Diamondhead 4-H Club.

Ms. Lott began showing at 4½ years old in pony classes at South Mississippi Horse Show and Rodeo Association shows along the Gulf Coast.

She has ridden every year and qualified her pony Apples for the State Championship finals in Jackson.

She began riding American quarter horses when she was six years old and continues to add to her list of classes to enter as well as having made the transition from the state association's show circuit to the American quarter horse shows.

Ms. Lott has qualified for the American Quarter Horse Junior World Show in 1985 and 1986.

In addition to the World Show, Lott and Branded Breeze in February entered the Dixie National Quarter Horse Show which is the third largest horse show in the nation.

She and her horse were winners of the Youth Gelding 1982 and Before Class as well as the Grand Champion for the Show award.

To Heather Lott, horse shows are fun but trail riding through the woods in Diamondhead has top priority.

She puts in two hours daily with her father to concentrate on coming shows and serious riding. The long weekends and distant trips to the AQHA shows have provided opportunities to make many new friends.

Her mother feels that Heather mostly finds the travel fun but sometimes the trips become hard, heartbreaking, challenging and rewarding. Heather says, "I wouldn't trade any of it...except maybe one weekend for a trip to Sea World and Disney World."

A comparison with popular TV character Punky Brewster is the easiest way to describe Heather Lott.

She is an outgoing and appealing child. In the fall, she will be in the fifth grade of St. Clare School in Waveland where both her mother and grandmother are teachers.

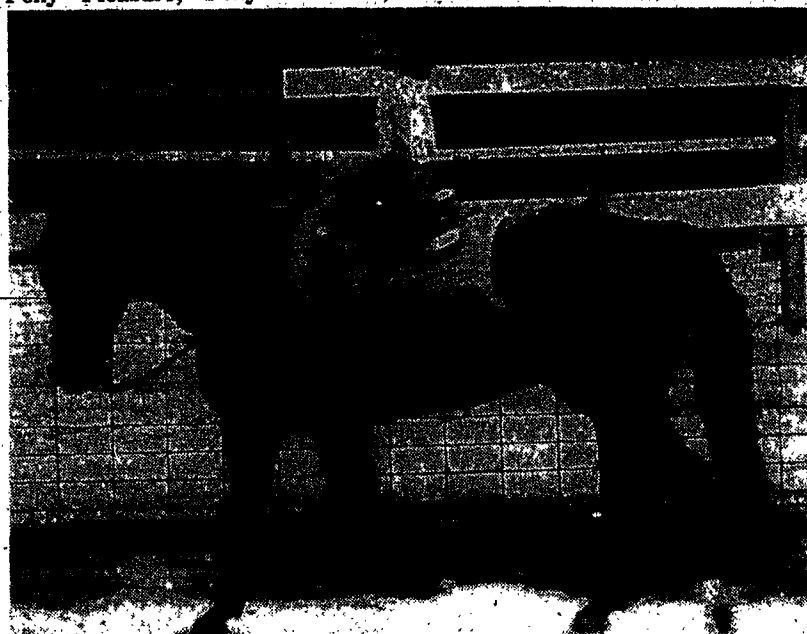

At St. Clare, she is a member of the Precision Cheerleading Unit, the choir, the track team (with a special talent for the running and standing broad jump), and the Handmaids.

She received the Beta Award for 1986. When time permits, she likes to water ski, swim, dance, bike and hike.

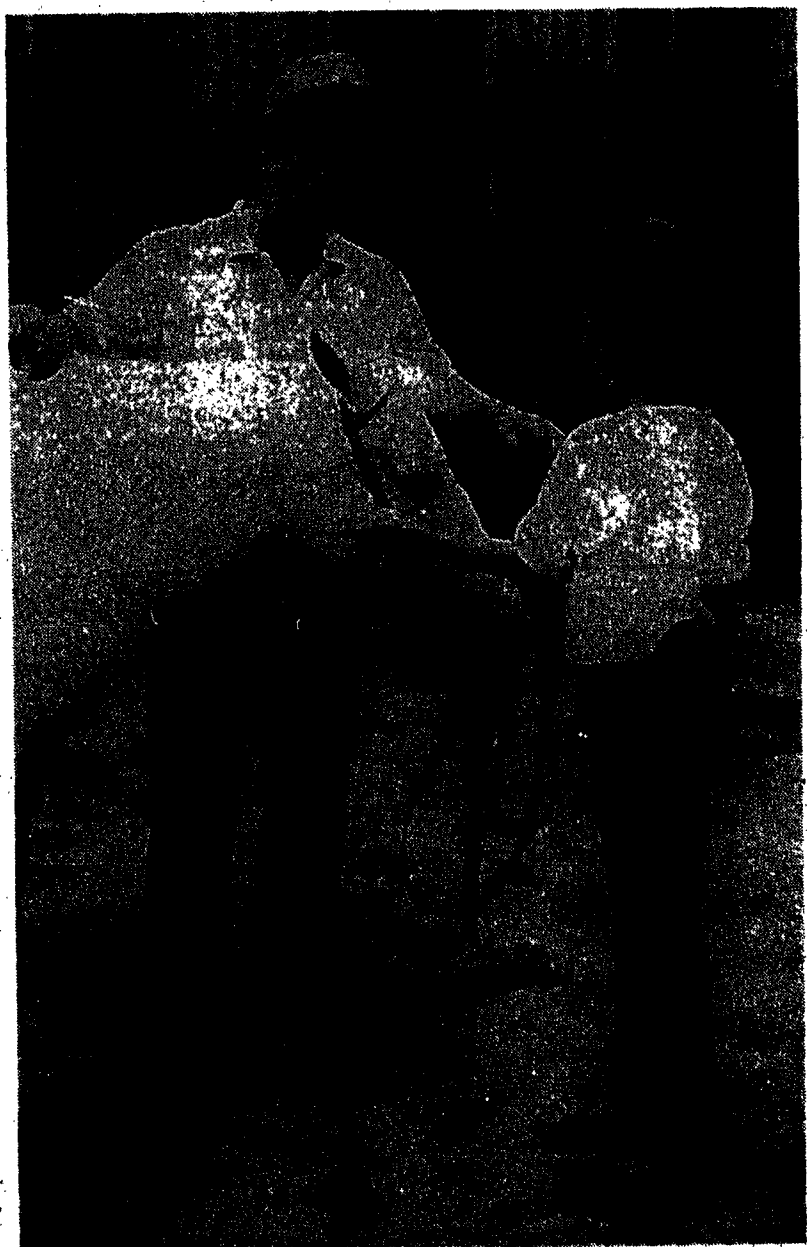

Heather's world is surrounded by animals. Besides her equine friends, there are cats, dogs, hamsters and birds.

Maria Lott helps Heather Lott dress in the matching riding habit of traditional Western style. Her cotton equitation shirt has a triple yoke, felt hat is blocked in the youth style, and she wears ties and gloves with her jacket and Western leather boots.

Morris Lott teases that Apples is "old enough to vote." Lott has owned this pony since he was nine years old. Apples has been used in pony rides and trial rides and many Hancock residents have had their first riding experience on the little grey pony. Heather Lott will ride Apples in the Diamondhead Riding Club show Saturday.

Heather Lott in her St. Clare School uniform displays some of the major trophies that she has won this year.

Her mother, Maria Lott and her maternal grandmother, Juanita Loup both are teachers at St. Clare.

Rules proposed to curb boating accidents involving alcohol and drugs

Secretary of Transportation Elizabeth Hanford Dole reports the U.S. Coast Guard is proposing action which has the potential to reduce alcohol-related commercial marine and recreational boating accidents.

"There is no place for alcohol or drugs when people are operating boats," the secretary said. "I want to reduce the tragic number of boating accidents involving use of either alcohol or drugs."

The Coast Guard issued a Notice of Proposed Rulemaking generally proposing standards applicable to commercial vessels, and an Advance Notice of Proposed Rulemaking seeking comments on the problem of drug and alcohol use by recreational boaters.

The comments regarding recreational boaters will be important for determining how best to formulate and enforce rules that will effectively reduce the incidents among this large and varied group.

Coast Guard commercial vessel accident records since 1981 confirm 44 deaths and 33 injuries were alcohol related, and officials believe it may be a factor in as many as half of the 1200 average annual recreational boating fatalities.

Operating a vessel while intoxicated became a specific federal offense under provisions of the Coast Guard Authorization Act of 1984 and violators will be subject to civil and criminal penalties after the final rules are issued.

The statute applies to all vessels operated on waters of the U.S. including foreign and domestic vessels used for recreation or in commercial service, and vessels owned in the U.S. when operated on the high seas. The same law directed the Secretary to set standards for determining intoxication.

The NPRM proposes that on commercial vessels for which the Coast Guard regulates personnel requirements, no one would be permitted to serve as a crewmember while having a blood alcohol content of .04 percent or higher. On other commercial vessels, the Coast Guard proposes to apply a standard of .10 percent. The largest group of vessels subject to the .10 percent standard would be fishing vessels.

The Coast Guard said the .04 percent standard for vessels with manning requirements is justified because these vessels carry more people than other commercial vessels and often carry hazardous cargo or oil.

Under the proposal, merchant seamen would be barred from performing their duties within four hours of consuming alcohol or while intoxicated, and civil penalties would be set for owners or masters of commercial vessels who allow merchant seamen to perform their duties while intoxicated.

A person's demeanor or performance would be the initial determining factor when drugs or alcohol were suspected. Tests could also be required. Following a commercial marine accident, the master of the vessel would be required to determine whether drugs or alcohol were involved.

In order to get more accurate information on the involvement of alcohol and drugs in accidents, the Coast Guard is proposing changes in reporting systems for commercial marine and recreational boating accidents. An assessment of the degree to which alcohol or drugs were a factor in an accident would have to be made by reporting persons.

The proposal would permit a merchant seaman who abuses alcohol or drugs to deposit his or her license or merchant mariner's document with the Coast Guard while seeking treatment through a rehabilitation program. This would have to be before the seaman was involved in an accident.

Collegiate soccer team tryouts scheduled June 28

GULFPORT— Collegiate soccer program will be launched this fall at William Carey College on the Coast in Gulfport. This will be the only four-year college, intercollegiate athletic program on the Mississippi Gulf Coast.

According to Athletic Director Bobby Halford, "This is an effort to strengthen our entire athletic program. Soccer is just one of the new sports we'd like to start. The Mississippi Gulf Coast is a natural area to have college soccer, since so many high schools have established programs. It's also one of the fastest growing sports in the country."

Carey's soccer team will compete in the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics (NAIA) and will play teams such as South Alabama, Millsaps, Belhaven, Nicholls State, Huntingdon, and Tulane.

Halford also indicates that he would be interested in scheduling games with soccer clubs from the University of Southern Mississippi, Mississippi State University, and Eckerd College.

A tryout day for all interested players will be held on Saturday, June 28, on the Coast campus in Gulfport. Soccer scholarships are available beginning this fall.

Construction on the field has begun, with an appropriate area already reserved on the Coast campus.

The Carey Athletic Department is interested in working with corporate sponsors for scoreboards, field preparation, and equipment needs.

A coach has been contacted and details are being finalized for his duties and a contract.

William Carey College on the Coast is the only four-year residential college on the Mississippi Gulf Coast. It is a coeducational, private school supported by the Mississippi Baptist Convention.

Anyone interested in this new soccer program or the college in general may contact Athletic Director Bobby Halford, William Carey College, Tuscan Avenue, Hattiesburg, MS 39401 - (601) 582-6110; or Joe Moore, Director of Business Affairs, Carey on the Coast, 1856 Beach Drive, Gulfport, MS 39501 - (601) 865-1500.

Opening Thursday, 10 a.m.

Black Creek eyed as wild and scenic river

Senator Thad Cochran is sponsoring legislation to designate a segment of the Black Creek in southeastern Mississippi as part of the national wild and scenic river system.

"This bill is consistent with and further supports earlier efforts by this senator in the preservation and conservation of our natural resources," he said in a floor statement introducing his bill.

"The wilderness area designation of 1984 and the wild and scenic river designation requested in this bill have received wide support from citizens in the state of Mississippi," Cochran commented.

"With citizen involvement, we have made significant progress toward the preservation of an important part of Mississippi heritage for all generations to study and enjoy," he stated.

Cochran's bill designates approximately 21 miles of the Black Creek in Perry County, from the Fairley Bridge Landing to Moody's Landing, as a wild and scenic river.

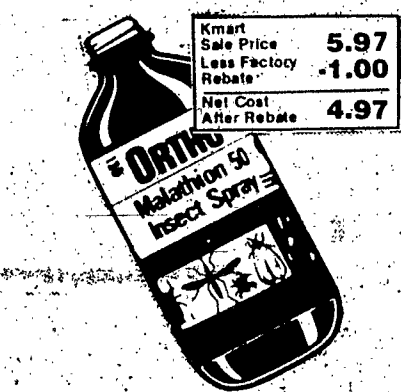

In 1984, Cochran sponsored a bill, S. 2808, designating two areas in the DeSoto National Forest in southeastern Mississippi as wilderness areas. These two areas consisted of 4,560 acres in the Black Creek area and 940 acres in the Leaf River area. This bill was passed by both the Senate and House and signed into law.

Approximately six miles of the Black Creek requested to be included in the wild and scenic river system, is within the black Creek Wilderness Area, Cochran pointed out.

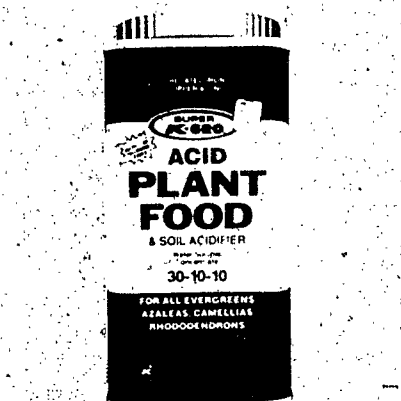

He noted that the Black Creek, a stream of 126 miles, was one of 1,500 river or river segments listed on the nationwide rivers inventory compiled by the National Park Service from 1978 to 1982.

The rivers listed in this inventory were determined to possess "outstanding and remarkable scenic, recreational, geologic, fish and wildlife values which qualified them for further consideration for wild and scenic status."

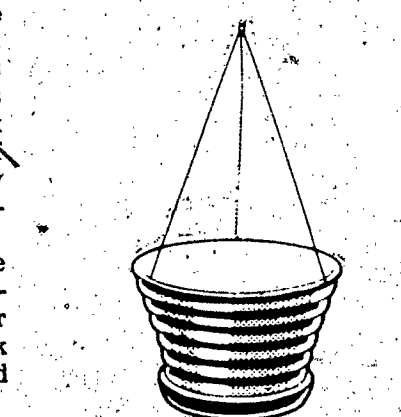

Hearing on Senator Cochran's bill, which seeks to amend the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act, are scheduled June 20 before a Senate Energy and Natural Resources subcommittee.

CALORIE COUNTDOWN

BY SUSAN DUFF

GREEN APPLE SALADS FOR DIETERS

Summer Granny Smith green apples are delightful to munch on all their own, and for dieters, they are a real treat at just 65 calories per average apple. If you want to make them into tempting salads that keep calories low and taste appeal high, here are two recipes, great on a buffet spread at a summer gathering.

Summer Solstice Salad

(serves four: 180 calories per serving)

In a large bowl, combine two and a half cups cooked, shell-style macaroni, two Granny Smith apples (cored and sliced into cubes) 2/3 cups diagonally sliced celery, 1/3 cup broken walnuts, 1/3 cup raisins, and 1/3 cup diet or lowered-calorie creamy style Italian salad dressing. Toss ingredients together, cover and chill until ready to serve.

Youth Section

THURSDAY, JUNE 19, 1986-1C

Dupree, Cuevas take top honors at HNC

Valedictorian and salutatorian of the 1986 graduating class at Hancock North Central High School are Jacob Dupree and Paula Cuevas.

Dupree is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Dupree of Diamondhead. He is the 1986 student council president, member of the Future Business Leaders of America, selected most likely to succeed, President of the Senior Class, and selected to attend the Hugh O'Brian Youth Leadership Foundation.

Besides his numerous academic awards including honors in English, geometry, trigonometry, algebra, and computers, Jacob was a star linebacker on the HNC football team.

He was cited in The SeaCoast Echo as Football Defensive Player of the Week in his junior and senior years. He is also a member of the Beta Club, the Tennis Team, the Foreign Language Club and the National Academy High School Math Achievement Academy.

Dupree plans to attend Mississippi State University to major in mechanical engineering.

Cuevas, salutatorian, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Cuevas of the Necaise Crossing Community. Paula has been an A-student throughout her high school and elementary years.

She was selected as Foreign Exchange Club Student of the Month in February of 1986; elected to be honored in 'Who's Who among American High School Students; attended Girls State after her junior year at HNC; and is a member of the Beta Club.

Cuevas won numerous awards in sports being presented the sportsmanship award during her junior year. She played softball and basketball on the Hawkettes varsity teams.

She was an officer of each of her high school classes; secretary of her ninth grade class; treasurer of the Student Council her senior year; and is now a member of the Future Business Leaders of America. She was a maid in 1984 and 1985 Homecoming courts and Queen her senior year. She was also a maid in the Wendell Ladner Bowl of 1985.

Cuevas will attend Pearl River Junior College and will later pursue a career in engineering.

WAS IT IN HANCOCK COUNTY?—This photograph of an early school house believed to have been taken in Hancock County has been donated to the Hancock County School System by the family of the late H. H. Talbert of Kiln, at one time a Hancock County school teacher. The photo was obtained from Herbert Talbert of Hattiesburg, nephew of the late H. H. Talbert, and submitted to Superintendent Terry Randolph of Hancock County School System by Al Shiyon, trust officer of Citizens Bank in Hattiesburg. Shiyon said his father, O. A. Shiyon of Hancock County, does not recognize the school house pictured. Anyone recognizing the building may contact Randolph at 467-4466.

Hancock third graders present talent-variety show

Tricks by Beth Bonner and Kent Malley mystify Gail White, Sharon Moran and Regina Paige.

The third grade classes at Hancock North Central Elementary recently presented a talent and variety show for parents, friends and fellow students in the cafeteria of the school.

More than 40 students participated in the show which included singing, musical instruments, dancing, cheering and athletic skills demonstrations, performance of magic, pantomime and acting and art categories.

Mrs. Sharon Moran's class sang "This Land is Your Land," while a team of six judges tabulated the results.

The three overall winners of the show were: First place, Gabe Plimpton, acting; second place, Karmen and Kendra Smith, singing; third place, David Bilbo, art.

There were also awards to the top contestants in each category.

These included Stacie Shroud, Alex Robinson, Kelvis Bankston, Jon Pacheco, Nicky Roy, Shenea Ladner and Teneill Cuevas. Winners were awarded certificates.

HNC math teacher selected for enrichment

Mrs. Betty Allen, advanced math teacher at Hancock North Central, has been honored by being chosen to participate in "Mathematics Refresher and Enrichment Through Application," a course for honors teachers. The program will be held at USM, Hattiesburg from June 16 until Aug. 8.

Designed for "key" secondary math teachers, the project will consist of three formal courses that are collectively oriented toward interdisciplinary mathematical problem-solving.

One of the most successful mathematical strategies is to demonstrate to students the usefulness of, and the need for, mathematics. Therefore, a "Capstone Activities" session will devote a period each day to identifying the major concepts in each secondary math course, and then finding a real world application that uses the concept.

Outstanding speakers have been chosen from universities and businesses. The data collected in this course will be used for in-service presentations by the participants to their co-workers during the fall of 1986.

BETTY ALLEN

"I Dare You" leadersl award recipients named

Rory King and Jesse Dupree have been awarded the national I DARE YOU LEADERSHIP AWARD in recognition of excellence in character and well-balanced personal development as well as leadership potential.

The honor was presented by D. E. Hillman at awards ceremonies held at Hancock North Central.

The I DARE YOU AWARD is made available each year by a special committee of the American Youth Foundation in cooperation with high schools across the country. The Award program has been in existence since 1941, and recognizes thousands of outstanding young people representing every state.

In addition to the national recognition, the Award provides recipients with a copy of William H. Danforth's well known book, I DARE YOU, and a personalized certificate.

Danforth, founder of Ralston Purina Company in St. Louis, was one of the founders of the American Youth Foundation. He dedicated much of his time and philanthropy to youth and community service, and challenged his readers to aspire to their highest potential, to attain constructive lives of service and citizenship and to commit themselves to excellence.

High school youth receiving the I DARE YOU AWARD also have the opportunity to apply for scholarships to attend the two-week National Leadership Conferences of the American Youth Foundation which emphasize personal growth and leadership.

The Danforth Youth Foundation, founded in 1924 as a not-for-profit private sector organization, provides summer camps and conferences that encourage youth in the discovery and enhancement of leadership skills and the promotion of balanced growth and development.

For more information about the American Youth Foundation and the "I Dare You" award programs, contact their office at 1415 Elbridge Payne Bldg., Chesterfield, Missouri 63017.

Overnight deposits earn $26,000 every 24 hours for state

Bill Cole, treasurer of the State of Mississippi, told HNC juniors and seniors how the state money can be invested overnight to make money.

Cole spoke in the cafeteria of the school in an ongoing program for Ms. Wilda McNatt's "Local and State Government" class.

Cole was first appointed to the job of treasurer to fill an unexpired term by Gov. William Winter.

In 1983 he sought election to the post and won.

Cole told the students that he has been to China, Russia, Poland and Japan representing Mississippi.

Recently he made a bond sale for Mississippi to Japan for 5.1 percent.

In the U.S. where former sales have always been made, the state would have been charged 8 percent. Mississippi is the first state in the U.S. to do so.

Cole reminded the students that they now have international conditions that change daily, but have control over their lives.

The lowering of gasoline prices was his example.

The student's job competition is now with Third World Countries who pay 40 cents to 60 cents an hour for factory work that used to be done in Mississippi.

Mississippi has lost 40,000 jobs to Brazil, Taiwan, Japan, and other countries.

Clearing the Smoke at the Workplace

Banning or at least limiting smoking in the workplace is a grassroots movement whose time has come. Already ten pioneering states have laws regulating smoking in the workplace. And even in communities where such laws don't exist, many companies have regulated or totally banned smoking on the jobsite.

There are good financial as well as health reasons for clearing the smoke from the workplace. This year more than 80 million workdays will be lost because of smoking-related illness. Lost productivity and wages due to these illnesses will mount to an awesome 30 billion dollars, according to the American Lung Association—the Christmas Seal People®.

Two thirds of the American workforce are nonsmokers, but many of them may be harmed by breathing fellow workers' smoke. New research indicates that long-term exposure to second-hand smoke may seriously threaten the health of nonsmokers, and may even be raising their chances of developing lung cancer.

Local American Lung Associations can help companies develop tailor-made policies to protect nonsmokers on the job. For more information on clearing the smoke at work, contact your local Lung Association.

Rance Necaise joins national

Rance D. Necaise of Necaise Crossing, a freshman computer science and engineering major at the University of Southern Mississippi, recently was initiated as a member of Gamma Beta Phi honorary society.

To become a member of the national honorary organization, students must rank academically in the top 20 percent of their class.

Necaise, 19-year old son of Willard and Ella Rea Necaise of Perkinston, is a member of Alpha Lambda Delta and Phi Eta Sigma.

A 1985 graduate of Hancock North Central High School, Necaise was the Salutatorian of his class and president of both the Beta Club and the Computer Club.

Bay youth completes Alabama Space Camp

David Eckert of Bay St. Louis went through astronaut training activities leading to two simulated missions in space at U. S. Space Camp at the Space and Rocket Center in Huntsville, Ala.

The simulated missions used a realistic trainer mockup of the Space Shuttle orbiter, the European Space Agency Spacelab and a space station.

Trainees also used a mission control developed especially for Space Camp.

During the missions, trainees performed experiments similar to experiments done by astronauts and scientists in space.

During the missions they also "launched" a satellite, and used a trio of astronaut training simulators for "in space" activities outside of the orbiter.

The outcome of the shuttle missions depended on how well the team members learned and worked as a team.

The activities were part of Space Camp Level II program, which is for young people ages 14-16. There is also a Space Camp program for children ages 11-13.

Many of the trainees' activities were at The Space and Rocket Center, which operates the camp and is the visitor's center for NASA's Marshall Space Flight Center.

At the museum, trainees experienced simulated space flights, including triple gravity forces.

Trainees also watched space-oriented films in the Spacedome

Theater, which features a state-of-the-art motion picture system that gives the audience the feel of being suspended in space.

Movies the trainees saw included "Hail Columbia" and "The Dream is Alive," which features film footage shot aboard a Space Shuttle during three missions.

The space odyssey began on Shuttle Operations Day when trainees began to learn to operate the shuttle cockpit and ground control simulators. They were divided into teams. They also studied various space suits used in space walks outside the orbiter.

Intensive training in each of the experiments or activities the trainees were to do during the upcoming missions.

The Atlantis Team began the Spacelab flights that occurred over a two-day period. The countdown, launch and flight were monitored by the mission control team on a multi-screen system.

Once in "orbit," the flight crew conducted experiments, performed simulated space walks, and docked with the space station.

Each team participated in two missions, with team members exchanging places on each flight, so each trainee could participate in a number of activities.

Space Camp sessions began March 9 and continue through Sept. 5. The week long Level II program costs $450. Trainees stay in the Space Camp dormitory and meals are provided.

Identifying growth industries will help during a job search

From academic librarian to zoologist and some 750 jobs in between, O. Snelling, chairman of the board and president of Snelling and Snelling, has the job market cornered. At least covered in detail for today's job seeker. From his Sarasota, Florida headquarters, Snelling runs the largest employment service in the world. The first step to helping people, especially young people, to find their life's work is to give them some idea of the possibilities," Snelling says. "If you identify industries that are going to grow in the next 20 years and then suggest which entry-level jobs offer the greatest potential for advancement, you've accomplished a lot."

By that standard, then, Snelling's offered up an encyclopedia of achievement in his book, "JOBS!" published by Simon & Schuster. It's the 1980's equivalent of Horace Greeley's famous advice: "Go west, young man. Go west," outlining seven growth industries and entry-level jobs that will help new entrants to the job market.

What are the industries destined to move us into the 21st century? "They're primarily service industries," Snelling says. "We think the computer industry — from sales to service to data entry and software development and much, much more — will offer rapid growth for employees. Engineers are in great demand now and will continue to be in demand, as our technologically-oriented society continues to evolve. We also project tremendous opportunities in financial services — banks, stock brokerage firms, and insurance."

With the "greying" of America and the increases in population ahead, health services and related technological fields are high on Snelling's list of "where-to-look" for jobs. He also espouses marketing as an opportunity-laden area for those who like to know what's selling and why.

Snelling highlights occupations in media and communications for increased growth. "People will always be reading newspapers, magazines, and books, as well as watching television and listening to radio in one form or another," he says. "So, we'll need editors, writers, broadcasters, technicians, and a host of other support personnel."

"Of course," Snelling points out, "we can't overlook the sales field, as a gold-mine of jobs. Salespeople are made, not born, so companies make an all-out effort to hire the most promising trainees in virtually every business category. Look around at top managers today and you'll see that most of them have had sales responsibilities somewhere in their careers. But, opportunity will be tremendous in sales because we project that the country will need more than 7.6 million salespeople by 1990. That's less than four years away."

Where should one start his or her job search? "In the library," Snelling advises. "Find out as much as you can about as many different occupations as possible while you're still in high school. You'll be able to determine areas of interest that you can explore further in college, vocation training, the armed forces, or the work force, gaining the necessary skills to succeed in the industry of your choice."

Checking out a copy of "JOBS!" certainly wouldn't hurt either. It lists more than 750 different occupations over 25 fields of endeavor, citing educational requirements or training needed, projected starting salaries, and opportunities for advancement. "We want to acquaint people with the vast array of career choices open to them," Snelling suggests.

"Job opportunities are unparalleled in our nation's history — a trend that's getting better by the day. But, people have to know where to look and be open to them. The biggest mistake we make is to restrict our thinking to preconceived ideas of what we, our friends and our families think we should do. We need to consider all of the possibilities."

McMurtray participates

Jim McMurtray of NASA's National Space Technology Laboratories is one of the instructors at the 1986 Governor's School for Gifted Young People.

The session, which is being held at the Mississippi University of Women in Columbus, began June 8 and will conclude June 28.

McMurtray, NSTL's aerospace education specialist, has lectured every year at the Governor's School since the program was founded in 1981 by former Gov. William Winter.

The school provides students with a "rigorous, college-level learning experience stressing the unity of the humanities, sciences, arts, technology and the ethical traditions of humankind."

This year the school has 158 junior and senior high school students who were nominated by their local school systems and selected by the Governor's School from approximately 400 applicants.

The 20 faculty members, including McMurtray, were also selected by a special committee and they are offering classes from which the students choose their major course of study. The students also are allowed to study one course of interest.

Classes are held five days a week and include lectures as well as laboratory work.

McMurtray's class is entitled, "Exploration of the Universe: The Future of Space Science."

Also representing NSTL will be Dr. Jerry Brown, chief educational programs officer, who will lecture on aeronautics and NASA aviation research during the second week of the program.

Gov. Bill Allain will address the students in a special closing convocation on the final day of the program.

SUMMER REGISTRATION—Hayward Guenard of Waveland presents his packet for clearance during regular registration for the summer semester at the University of Southern Mississippi. ## Identifying growth industries will help during a job search

From academic librarian to zoologist and some 750 jobs in between, O. Snelling, chairman of the board and president of Snelling and Snelling, has the job market cornered. At least covered in detail for today's seeker. From his Sarasota, Florida headquarters, Snelling runs the largest employment service in the world.

The first step to helping people, especially young people, to find their life's work is to give them some idea of the possibilities," Snelling says. "If you identify industries that are going to grow in the next 20 years and then suggest which entry-level jobs offer the greatest potential for advancement, you've accomplished a lot."

By that standard, then, Snelling's offered up an encyclopedia of achievement in his book, "JOBS!" published by Simon & Schuster. It's the 1980's equivalent of Horace Greeley's famous advice: "Go west, young man. Go west," outlining seven growth industries and entry-level jobs that will help new entrants to the job market.

What are the industries destined to move us into the 21st century? "They're primarily service industries," Snelling says. "We think the computer industry—from sales to service to data entry and software development and much, much more—will offer rapid growth for employees. Engineers are in great demand now and will continue to be in demand as our technologically-oriented society continues to evolve. We also project tremendous opportunities in financial services—banks, stock brokerage firms, and insurance."

With the "graying" of America and the increases in population ahead, health services and related technological fields are high on Snelling's list of "where-to-look" for jobs. He also espouses marketing as an opportunity-laden area for those who like to know what's selling and why.

Snelling highlights occupations in media and communications for increased growth. "People will always be reading newspapers, magazines, and books, as well as watching television and listening to radio in one form or another," he says. "So, we'll need editors, writers, broadcasters, technicians, and a host of other support personnel."

"Of course," Snelling points out, "we can't overlook the sales field as a gold-mine of jobs. Salespeople are made, not born, so companies make an all-out effort to hire the most promising trainees in virtually every business-category. Look around at top managers today and you'll see that most of them have had sales responsibilities somewhere in their careers. But, opportunity will be tremendous in sales because we project that the country will need more than 7.6 million salespeople by 1990. That's less than four years away."

Where should one start his or her job search? "In the library," Snelling advises. "Find out as much as you can about as many different occupations as possible while you're still in high school. You'll be able to determine areas of interest that you can explore further in college, vocation training, the armed forces, or the work force, gaining the necessary skills to succeed in the industry of your choice."

"Checking out a copy of 'JOBS!' certainly wouldn't hurt either. It lists more than 750 different occupations over 25 fields of endeavor, citing educational requirements or training needed, projected starting salaries, and opportunities for advancement. 'We want to acquaint people with the vast array of career choices open to them,' Snelling suggests.

"Job opportunities are unparalleled in our nation's history—a trend that's getting better by the day. But, people have to know where to look and be open to them. The biggest mistake we make is to restrict our thinking to preconceived ideas of what we, our friends and our families think we should do. We need to consider all of the possibilities."

ETV Brief

B.B. KING SPECIAL

Mississippi ETV will rebroadcast "B.B. King at Parchman Prison" at 1:30 p.m., Thursday, June 19.

Taped at Parchman in 1984, the concert features King performing such hits as "Let the Good Times Roll," "Got My Mojo Working," "Infatuation Blues" and his trademark, "The Thrill Is Gone."

In the program, King explains that the blues are not only sad, but the blues are a way of feeling good by expressing happiness or just venting the bad feelings and blowing off steam.

"Let's face it," he says, "blues were started during hard times... You sing the blues maybe when you are blue, but it doesn't make you bluer. It's kind of like a relief valve; it's letting some of the steam off."

In the opener to the program, viewers are transported to center state by way of an aerial route over the Mississippi Delta in and around the Parchman area in Sunflower County where the blues and where B. B. himself, the reigning king of the blues, were born.

On stage, King captures his audience with his virtuosity on his guitar, "Lucille," and with his soulful wailing empathy about good times and bad times.

"There are two sides to all stories," he says. "I try to tell both."

NEXT WEEK'S HOROSCOPE

BY SALOME

Aries (Mar. 21-Apr. 19) Disappointments may be blessings in disguise. Take the time you now have available to look into other situations that could prove more rewarding.

Taurus (Apr. 20-May 20) Never mind the heel who kicked the Bovine's plans into disarray. Pick up the pieces and then go out and kick up your heels with someone else instead.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) Control your tendency to probe too deeply into a new friend's life. Your friendly curiosity could be misinterpreted as nasty nosiness.

Cancer (June 21-Jul. 20) An old friend remains unconvinced by your plea for understanding. You may have to do more than offer explanations and promises. Be patient.

Leo (Jul. 21-Aug. 22) An energetic period gives a boost to some lagging energy reserves. Enjoy enhanced activities on all levels. New contacts promise much but deliver slowly.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Putting too much stock in promises could be a waste of time. You're better off getting things started on your own. Others will then join in to help.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Relationships with kin are stronger than ever. Old friends remain good friends. New friends are coming into your life. Plan a long holiday weekend.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) You deserve to be given credit for the excellent work you've been doing. Remember: Toot your own horn or you may be drowned out by someone else's brass.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) Keep holiday plans flexible in order to deal with possible schedule shifts or with changes in the number of persons involved in your plans.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Expect to have to deal with snags that force holiday planning changes. A cheerful approach keeps everyone happy and eager to help in the emergency.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Your recent success becomes the foundation on which new successes are laid. For now, though, take time out to plan a gala holiday with kin and kin.

Pisces (Feb. 19-Mar. 20) A friendly warning may be ignored in a frantic race to get too much done too soon. Take time to listen to a friend who really cares more than you imagine. © 1986, McNaught Synd.

Where There's Smoking, the Children Suffer

Women who smoke during pregnancy are taking unnecessary risks with their unborn children. Rates of stillbirth, premature delivery, and neonatal death all go up among mothers-to-be who smoke, according to the American Lung Association—the Christmas Seal People®.

Even after the baby is born, smoking can harm the infant's health, says the ALA. Exposure to cigarette smoke is considered a risk factor in sudden infant death syndrome (SIDS). In addition, passive smoking can cause an increase of severe lower respiratory tract infections in infants.

Cigarette smoke also can have an adverse effect on the health of children with preexisting lung disease, especially asthma. If the parents quit smoking, the child's symptoms usually decrease.

We had our cataract surgery with confidence...

...and at no cost to us!

Bill and I are on a fixed income, so we had put off important cataract surgery. Then we learned Koskan Eye Clinic performs cataract surgery with implantation of intraocular lens at no cost to patients who have met their Medicare Part B deductible (or $75.00). What a blessing!
